

THE PUBLIC TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM IS IN A STATE OF DISGRACE

While the tickets are expensive, the passengers suffer from an overcrowded and slow means of transportation. Even though the public transport vehicles are overcrowded, people don't meet each other. Friendly gestures are scarce, while hostile and racist attitudes are commonplace. As if things were not bad enough, a further increase in ticket prices (30-50%) as well as a decrease (20-40%) in the salaries of the workers of the public transport system (PTS) has already been decided. Furthermore, any PTS lines which don't earn enough money will be discontinued regardless of how many people they serve. On top of that, a new corps of ticket inspectors (most likely employees of a private security company) will patrol bus stations and PTS vehicles, charging fines to those without tickets or those who may offer their used ticket to a fellow passenger.

WE DON'T PAY BECAUSE:

We owe them nothing while they owe us everything.

Moving to and from our daily jobs means time already stolen and poorly spent.

They try to make us pay for everything we do and now they demand even more.

The moment of negation is creative; it opens new spaces and gives us time to talk, to support each other and to communicate.

Against the devaluation of our lives, we demand everything.

SOLIDARITY BETWEEN THE OPPRESSED

Because what we lack is solidarity and not a state of blissful consumption

Because the current change in the status of the PTS afflicts both the workers and the passengers

Because the PTS will lose any social orientation, operating only in terms of economic gain

Because in this city where alienation reigns in our social intercourse, a friendly gesture or a conversation seem scarce and precious

We show our solidarity and friendship:

Defending our fellow passengers against the ticket inspectors

Kindly offering our used tickets to other passengers

While we stand in solidarity with PTS workers, we can not ignore a very important point: the ticket inspectors. For it is them who break any social bond striving for personal gain (the bonus which they gain from each penalty given) against any communal benefit. This is something which demands answers from the workers themselves, but also for the part of the passengers who have to resist and de-legitimize the paid scums of the PTS.

WIDESPREAD ARREST OF PAYMENT

(tolls, hospital tickets, bills, credit cards, bank loans etc)

AS A MINIMUM reparation for our looted lives
